

Garthorpe and Fockerby at War (A Military Lives Heritage Book)

In August 1914, the small rural joined villages of Garthorpe in Lincolnshire and Fockerby in Yorkshire with a combined population of under 300, prepared to send their fathers, uncles, husbands, nephews, brothers and sons to war. By the end of the war over 60 men would have answered the call and 4 would have paid the ultimate price. The villages commemorated those who died on a plaque and also compiled a Roll of Honour of those who survived. At least those they knew about. Then, in 1939, the village once again sent its men to fight again, and many more answered the call. After the two world wars, like numerous other villages in Great Britain, Garthorpe and Fockerby remembered its men. This book is about those men, their sacrifices and their wars. Military Lives Heritage Books offer a unique opportunity to commemorate the sacrifices made by towns and villages across this country. Whether from a village, a school, a community group, or an organisation, we enable those who served their country to have their lives professionally researched, written and published, with relevant military background events included.
