

Marching with the First Nebraska: A Civil War Diary

August Scherneckaus diary is the most important firsthand account of the Civil War by a Nebraska soldier that has yet come to light. A German immigrant, Scherneckau served with the First Nebraska Volunteers from 1862 through 1865. Depicting the units service in Missouri, Arkansas, and Nebraska Territory, he offers detail, insight, and literary quality matched by few other accounts of the Civil War in the West. His observations provide new perspective on campaigns, military strategy, leadership, politics, ethnicity, emancipation, and a host of other topics. Scherneckau takes readers on the march as he and his comrades plod through mud and snow during a grueling winter campaign in the Missouri Ozarks. He served as a provost guard in St. Louis, where he helped save a former slave from kidnappers and observed the construction of Union gunboats. He describes the process of transforming a regiment from infantry to cavalry, and his account of the First Nebraskas pursuit of Freemans Partisans in Arkansas is an exciting portrayal of mountain fighting. An annotated edition that brings to bear the editors and translators respective expertise in both the Civil War and the German language, Scherneckaus account is an important addition to primary material on the wars forgotten theater. It will be a valued resource for historian and Civil War enthusiast alike.
