

This is three years a family of five lived and worked in Iran, during a tumultuous period of Iranian history. It was a glorious adventure, with a certain amount of danger. They lived in the city of Isfahan, on the fabled silk road. They saw many remnants of Persias past, as The Pahlavi Dynasty began to crumble. The Author taught Iranian officers how to fly helicopters, as the Shah prepared for war with Saddam Hussein. His wife worked at the same base, in the technical library and their children went to The American School of Isfahan. This is Persia with 43 pictures.
