

John King Fisher: King of the Nueces Strip

Known as one of the best pistol fighters of his day, John King Fisher has remained an enigma in the chronicles of the Western Frontier. While other gun fighters have achieved notoriety through the stories told in the pulp magazines and newspapers of the day, King Fisher has largely been ignored. Credited with killing a string of men during his lifetime the mere mention of his name was usually enough to sober up a drunken opponent or cause a sober man to contemplate his own epitaph. Fisher refused to be called a cold-blooded murderer but rather stand-up gunfighter who faced his adversaries in the winner-take-all shootout. Leon Metz in his book, The Shooters, described King Fisher: Some men become local legends in their time and place, but never achieve a national reputation. By all odds King Fisher should have become a better-known figure than Billy the Kid or John Wesley Hardin. He had all the attributes: good looks, youth, style, color, deadliness and cold courage. In his book Taming The Nueces Strip, Durham stated that Fisher, killed clean with either hand; he was one of the genuine two-pistol shooters. John King Fisher tells his story in vivid detail and relates the true account of his assassination with Ben Thompson in a mystery shrouded ambush in a San Antonio saloon on a chilly March night in 1884.
