

Answers To The Great Mysteries Of Life

A comedy novella about an alien race called the Malarkians who realize they have to try and stop us from blowing up our own planet and possibly throwing theirs out of alignment. They send their leader who knows the answers to everything in life except for one, how to prevent humans from declaring war on each other. The story is a hilarious series of misunderstandings between people from different cultures that underscores the folly of the modern world and how we choose to live our lives. It also delves into the meaning of what is an alien. The alien leader, Commander Zowza, showers the human race with all manner of gifts unknown to the people of Earth. However, there are always unintended consequences. He gives us special sauce that makes bland food taste great hoping that everyone will eat their vegetables. Instead, obesity rates skyrocket. He gives us access to all of their resources, including the mineral every man yearns to get his hands on called Beyonceum. However, they disintegrate once entering Earth's atmosphere. He gives us special shoes that provide a level of unmatched comfort only to learn that the spirit in the shoes lead people in unpredictable directions. Authority figures grow increasingly uncomfortable with Commander Zowza. If the public can rely on him for all of their answers, why would they need any other leaders? As a result, a campaign to discredit the visitors begins. The symbol of the opposition is Reverend Hezekial Gassmann who is concerned primarily with the sale of his books and DVDs. The opposition pushes the President of the United States, Barry Manilow IV, a descendant of today's pop singer, and a dim bulb, into an adversarial position. Every unintended consequence causes the President's popularity rating, which was never high, to sink like a rock. Those seeking to discredit the aliens question their motives and sow the seeds of distrust, implying that the aliens have a grander scheme to enslave us. What ensues is a series of events that shows us the way to a much more peaceful world. If the likes of President Manilow can lead us into an increasingly harmonious world, then you can too. It is all a question of how much time and effort everyone wants to dedicate to the future.
